WILL DEDICATE CHURCH SEPT. 15

St. James Church will be Dedicated on that Date. Main Auditorium not to be Used before Dedication Day.

At a meeting Tuesday evening of the building and finance committees and the church council of St James Lutheran church it was decided to dedicate the new structure on Sunday, September 15. The main auditorium will not be used for services before that time.

The building is now going on rapidly to completion and the interior finish has been very much hastened by all who have inspected it. The walls, ceiling and windows make a very pretty effect and the church when completed will be one of Gettysburg's most handsome structures. It was decided at the meeting Tuesday evening to have the woodwork and all wood finish instead of the highly polished varnish and white that will work in the general appearance of the interior of the church.

The carpeting of the room will be in charge of the Ladies' Aid Society. The entire floor will be carpeted. They have inspected a number of samples but want to see a few more before making the final selection

Work on the concrete pavements will be started within the next few weeks and, with the completion of these and the clearing away of the debris at the exterior of the structure, its entire outside appearance will be greatly improved.

The old bell has been on the new cupola for several weeks but it will not be rung until Mr. John has finished the woodwork and the ringing of the bell will mark the practical completion of the church building

A man from the Otto organ factory will be here next week to rebuild the old organ and it will be in place again before many weeks have passed.

"Cut Off" Talk Revived

That ten Western Maryland Railway Company officials make a material change in its main line route covering a considerable part of the distance between Baltimore and Williamsport, provided the enumeration with the Philadelphia and Lake Erie side in the eastbound tonnage of the road to the extent that it is anticipated, was the assertion of a Western Maryland official Tuesday. The proposed new line will leave the old road at Williamsport and connect with it again at Westminster, cutting off a very good route between the two points which will permit of the hauling of much heavier freight trains with the same locomotive power than is possible over the present line.

The new road will dip considerably to the north after leaving Williamsport and pass quite close to Frederick

Besides shortening the way for goods the new route is expected to shorten the distance between Cumberland and Baltimore by quite a few miles, and will mean quicker time for passenger trains as well as the handling with the addition of heavier loads, for freight and coal trains.

At Reading, where this year's encampment is held, the town was visited by thousands of people almost daily.

Difficulties with the Nikus Sauer to be Solved and Busy Days are ahead. Now Operating with Full Force.

With the solution of the difficulty to get all bricks in the same kiln uniformly burned, and with the purchase of new clay, two of the principal obstacles at the plant of the Auburn Shale Brick Company, have been met and work has now been resumed there after a shut-down of four weeks.

Krer since the establishment of the local plant there has been great difficulty in burning the bricks uniformly. Those at the center of the kiln would come out perfect while those on the sides would melt or. If those on the edge would burn, the center bricks would not be sufficiently to stand. A new forced draught system has now been installed and a tryout on one of the kilns has given a completely satisfactory result and the other kilns will be equipped in the same way.

Some weeks ago it was found that the material was getting low. Ores and that a perfect clay would soon be exhausted so to the union. W. F. Oswald, the local manager, has just completed a contract for which means he has purchased new dies and mills by means of which the clay will be ground to the proper fineness. The animals first show difficulty in swallowing food and later the spine sways in become affected. the animals finally going down and death resulting if they are not put out of the way to avoid unnecessary suffering.

The disease seems to be almost incurable and after two of the horses showed that their recovery was impossible they were sold on Saturday. Wednesday the mule became so ill that it was found that it also would have to be killed to end its suffering.

Published reports are said to be the cause for the trouble It will be recalled that a regular epidemic of the disease broke out among the cavalry horses at the camp of instruction near Gettysburg two years ago and a number of the horses either died or had to be killed. Since that time it is reported there for the trouble and finally the horses were taken to Washington by the government where they became infective.

Nothing seemed available that would help the stricken animals and nearly all of the horses which showed signs of the disease were given up. Several of the horses were taken, however, by farmers in the vicinity where the last movement was noticed.

Other cases in the vicinity of Mr. Robert s have been all lately but, it is thought, from other ailments

An unannounced ceremony of unusual significance to probably hundreds of Gettysburg people took place at the service in St. James Lutheran church Sunday morning, when a fine oil enupon portrait of Miss Alice Powers was unveiled.

The presentation of the picture followed an unusually good program by the pupils of the Sunday School. Rev. J. B. Baker told of Miss Powers' years of devotion 1.th to Sunday School and to the Lutheran Church. For forty five years, from 1865 to 1910, she was connected with St. James school and for several years longer with the public schools of Gettysburg. The portrait was covered with an American flag, donned scout fringe in view of the early part of the program and to good citizenship which she gave Gettysburg boys and girls.

The portrait was presented to the Infant Department of the Sunday School by Miss Powers' two surviving sisters, Mrs. Jane McDonnell of Gettysburg and Mrs. Virginia Smith, of Baltimore. It will hang in the room occupied by the children as a constant reminder of wonderful devotion.

Following the unveiling of the picture, all those who had received their first training in public or Sunday school rose, and they were a goodly number. The entire audience then rose and sang Miss Powers' favorite song "I Think when I Read that Sweet Story of Old," the benediction following immediately afterward.

The two portions of town have special treatment with a preparation resembling coal tar and creosote which it did not prove on successful as the property holders paid for it and they did not, but are justified in trying it again this year

WORK DELAYED

Progress on the federal building has been considerably delayed by the non-arrival of important stones. For some inexplicable reason the stones one individual stone holds up an entire section of the work. It is the cupholder of the stone for that purpose that has not arrived.

The north and south walls have been erected up to the top of the first story windows and were it not for this one wall, the operations being governed by the weather would have been shipped. It is expected that the columns to be placed at the front of the building will arrive before many days. There will be in three pieces each. The drums, or main part of the shaft of columns are now in place

The contractor hopes the building Sunday or who have been watching the process of cleaning the stones are surprised to see how white they appear when wet. Some of the stones—almost white and of fine grain—will soon become as ugly blue when water is applied to them. The contractor is sweeping up the blue veins very plainly.

CHILD SPENT 48 HOURS IN WOODS

Little Annie Nary Returns Home with Story of Spending Two Days and Nights in Woods out Far from her Home.

With a huge appetite but apparently none the worse for her experience little Annie Nary returned to the home of her adopted parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Nary, of this place, early on Saturday afternoon after having spent two days and nights in the woods in the vicinity of her home. The child was three miles away from home and the searching parties did not get near her, the little girl finding her own way back.

She wandered through the Mc Ilheny, Hunsecker and Wolfe woods and was in the last named of these on Saturday night when she built a fire in the direction of her home. Wesley's woods are about two and a half miles from the Nary home.

She had nothing to eat all of this time—from Thursday afternoon until about the same time Saturday—and she was ravenously hungry when found back to her home. Sunday her hunger was assuaged and the child was none the worse for her experience.

Search parties were formed on Friday and Saturday and on these days and Sunday no effort will be made to find the child. Many of those who joined in the search were out on Saturday afternoon after hearing of the child's disappearance.

STORIES OF 28TH WISCONSIN

The Twenty-eighth Wisconsin was composed almost wholly of Waukesha and Walworth county men. Large numbers were recruited from among the farmer boys, those sturdy, generous, liberal sons of liberal generations contributions. The regiment assembled at Camp Utley, near Milwaukee, Milwaukee, and was mustered in as part of the Second brigade.

Dr. James M. Lewis of Oconomowoc was the first colonel, with Col. J. A. Watrous, U. S. A. in the Milwaukee district.

On December 20, 1862, the regiment left Milwaukee with orders to report at Columbus, Ky., reaching there two days later. It was at once sent to Union City, where it was expected it might have to oppose the Rebel raid in fight, but returned to Columbus the next day, the enemy having taken his flight. Early in January, 1863, it went to Helena, Ark., and became a part of the Thirteenth army corps, a member of the Second brigade. From this point it went on transports to St. Charles, Ark., where, with a force of cavalry and artillery, all under command of General Lewis, it took charge of the place. It returned to Helena, where it was ordered to prepare to camp there until February 24. The regiment did much extra duty, doing picket and guard duty and occupied for a long time in the hard work at constructing fortifications. Then, on March 24, Twenty-eighth went to the support of the Sixteenth regiment. It was under the fire of a gunboat and a battery, and lost in the latter part of a day. It participated in the unsuccessful attack on Fort Pemberton, and after that returned to Helena. It then participated in the capture of a section of artillery, commanded by General Lindsay, met and drove back a large force of cavalry and destroyed a numerous quantity of stores, returning to camp without loss. From April 1, 1863, until July 4, the regiment was in camp at Helena, and then participated in the siege of the place. It also during that time participated in the expedition to the Red section of Cotton Point, Ark.

Lieut. President Coleman, who had entered the service as colonel at the Fourth Wisconsin, was placed in command of the force at Helena, a fort, and the Twenty-eighth was in the Twenty-eighth Wisconsin. General Coleman was entrusted with the thorough preparation that had been made for the expedition, and he began on July 4 the most terse, short 3,500 men, was in good physical and the force was substantially intact that he held it in spite of the attempts of an army of 15,000 Confederates and defeated them with terrible slaughter. The Twenty-eighth received orders from the commander for the gallant and splendid conduct. It occupied an important position and lost a number killed.

In October, 1864, the Twenty-eighth accompanied Gen. Fred Steele on the Little Rock campaign, Colonel Lewis and command of the Second brigade and Lieutenant Colonel Coleman of the regiment. It remained at Little Rock until December 20, when it was ordered to join the Thirteenth army corps, Colonel Clayton, who afterward became governor of Arkansas, in command, and pleased with the Wisconsin regiment that he kept it with him during the whole campaign. The regiment got to the reconstruction with it. Colonel Gray was in command of the post at Pina Bluff for some time. His command participated in an expedition to destroy a bridge on the Saline river in March, 1865, which on guard at that point it was attacked by a force of cavalry and artillery. The Twenty-eighth met defeated and fled in confusion, but until the rest of the forces of the Unionists were in position. The Confederates were repulsed with great loss.

Springtime of Life Is Full of Contradictions, But is Great Flood of Energy.

How shall I describe Youth, the time of contrarieties, and incomplete, infinite melancholy—all of those moods are equally part of it, the strange confortation of life. One thing, at best, it does not feel, rich, full and flood of energy. It is he if the story of the lad loses everything through the slow, placid years of childhood, and suddenly finds himself broken and the waters rushed out, furious and unrestrained, before anything down into the quieter channels of middle life. Youth is the suddenly seized with a poisonous consciousness of being alive, which is agonizing to the naive unquestioning acceptance of childhood. It is the self overpowerningly urged toward self-expression. Just as the bee goes into a great, blooming, humming confusion, and without any apparent movement, every color, every sound, kicks mostly in response to all directions, and only gradually gets his movements coordinated with the wonderful precise movements of his elders so the youth suddenly turns into a confusion of ideas and appeals and irradiations responds to the most obscure way in the new spiritual world, and gradually learns to find his own way about in it, and get his thoughts and feelings into some kind of order.—Atlantic Monthly.

ORIGIN OF A POPULAR DOG

In ancient times each district in the Highlands had its characteristic breed of dog; it was to see carefully that the then flourishing firm of Colonel Hogg company did not do a too flourishing business in the north country. Sometimes these tudhunters were of "the Hogg" breed, sometimes of those of farmers and grazers; but always they were characteristic. Many were of value or and considerable profit in their offices, and in time to their masters or less hereditary. Their duty was simple. They waged a war of extermination against the vermin, which, however, was very different and apart from the good old English sport of fox hunting.

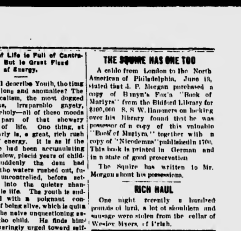
In the rough country home and hound would have been worse than useless, as the vermin dwelt and fed in such rocky ground that he could not be dug out. The only chance was a dog small enough to follow the fox, or otter, or badger into his earth or hole; strong enough to bring him out dead or alive; and game enough to do both. A dog developed from this necessity, and from the union of the ancestor of the present-day Scottish terrier or Dutting

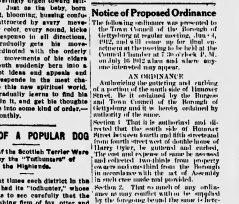
Dressed Chicken.

She waited in vain for her husband with a chicken dinner, but after she had given out hope that he was coming on and captured a toothsome-looking chicken from the roost for supper. When she simply couldn't bear to hand it to the cat. She took it, plucked it, put chloroform in the house, however, so she decided to prepare his remains after the oven via the anaesthesia route.

He remained quietly, but to her horror he recovered consciousness as soon as she had finished preparing him. Stricken with remorse then, she rather has picked from in a hasty mode suit of white flannel, that fitted him like a regular "variety stage" garment. Then she turned him out into the chicken run again.

Editors insist upon bonny endings in their newspaper stories, so the remainder of this tale is better left untold. Suffice to say that although the feathers make fine hide, white flannel normal made this roaster himself again.





I will have a carload of Ohio and Kentucky horses by Friday the 28th.

CROP CONDITIONS REPORTED GOOD

Wheat and Hay Crops will be Bumpers According to Reports. Methods Used by Farmers now Far in Advance of Long ago.

Unless some unforeseen calamity occurs within the next few weeks the wheat and hay crops this year will be the best and most bountiful harvested in Adams county for some years. The weather of spring throughout this section are now in bloom and give promise of a heavier yield to grain and straw than for many years past.

The hay crop is being made and will be ready in the first cutting of alfalfa has been harvested and some growers have cut their second, and the new crop is marked thereby getting advantage of old hay prices.

A trip through almost any section of Adams county at this time of the year shows that the farmer of today is not the farmer—in ideas, in methods, in practice—of 25 years ago. Perhaps at no time in the past year is this more surely corroborated than in the fields of corn which the appearance of the various fields is an index to the progress that may be expected.

The farmer of today is on up to date business line ruler of the soil. He is well informed as to the best methods of tilling. It is not unusual for one to see in the corn fields of a farmer a hoe, to find upon a table there or four magazines and agricultural journals which he personally reads and from which practical suggestions found there in are carried out.

Perhaps nowhere in the thriftiness of the farmer is there a more noticeable than about the home. Pretty lawns and flowers were rarely to be found in the country a few years a country ago. Today one finds for instance, lawns arranged with carpet or mowed in walks, shrubbery and flowers in the yard, buildings painted and cared for with interest. Houses are being remodeled so as to afford more and better conveniences of all types.

There are many farm houses in Adams Co. today to which the owner may point with pride the convenience of the city folk with fresh water, plenty of elbow room. Many country homes are equipped with baths, steam heat, etc.

RUMOR SAYS NEW READING STATION

Chief Engineer Hunter of the Philadelphia and Reading Visits Gettysburg to Consider Better Facilities for Next Year.

William Hunter, chief engineer of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad, was in Gettysburg on Saturday with a number of engineers looking in Baltimore town to go over the matter of providing better passenger and other facilities to handle the 1916 crowds which the road will bring to this section. The erection of a new station is the subject of a well defined rumor.

A number of engineers were with him as will be laid here and plans for this work are now under consideration. It is suspected that these will all be laid in the heading fields to the north or the present station where much room can be secured for storing cars and handling trains. Portions of the road between Gettysburg and Carlisle Junction are to be double tracked and the capacity of the road greatly increased thereby.

The matter of a new station is important that has long been under consideration and the fact that the improvements have been felt for many years. Several years ago plans were drawn for the erection of a new structure west of the present station and below the present level of the tracks. An underground approach under the tracks near the mill property was provided for and plans which never got further than the paper stage. The present route has it that the station be moved to the east. It is well out toward the water tank.

The rapid rise of the railroad line, in Reading, was much impressed at that city with the necessity of providing, wit, also need for better facilities at the plaza and that the station approaches be enlarged and improved. A visit which was, however, only in the line of a pleasure jaunt.

The matter of a union station to be erected by both roads has always been considered a good one by the railroads but it is said on good authority that the matter of the new station is a complishment than ever before and that the roads are not in favor especially of any such solution of present difficulties being made.

Delights of Repartee

It was to supper with Grandmother Kelly last night," Miss Connelly informed Lize Priske, as she threw herself on the couch in the rest room, "and of all the fuss!" She pressed and her face broke into a reminiscent smile. "She ain't my real grandmaw, you know. She's good Irish stock now, but as side lies always called her grandmother. But there's way out on the west side and no one pays awful close attention to you if you're grandmother don't get mad and she's never mad with her about once in every so often.

"Last night it was my turn and when I got there Grandmother Kelly says to me, 'Sallie,' she says, 'I scared poor old Grandma Getchell to come over tonight and I'd be real obliged if you'd run over to her son's place and fetch her. Like as not that draught of his'n will have her short and be turrerid, and if that poor old thing should fall down I be afraid there's none of her bones. They sits awful brittle, you know as a person gits older.' It was funny because Grandmother Kelly she's seventy-four and years younger then Grandmaw Getchell.

"I was just a-startin' to pike over and get Grandmaw Getchell when the old lady come bustin' up the stairs. 'Now you drop that, Sallie Kelly,' says to the door. 'Why, grandmaw,' I says, 'she said you wanted to see me.' 'Well I don't think you ought to 'a' done it. It ain't right for you to come all that way alone.'

"Grandmaw Getchell is pushed just her red bugles takin' off her hat and I says, 'Grandmaw, I'm all right. Quit.' 'Grandmaw,' says she.

"I'm just as well able to walk as three times that old Getchell ever was, and a good deal more able then some of the Getchells ever was in their prime if they ever hit the sidewalk."

"Now, Cousie, I don't want to have you a-talkin' that way about Grandmother Kelly says, just as sweet as you please. 'I'm real obliged to you for supper, grandmaw,' she says, 'but I'm afraid I'll have to run over to you to eat. When a person's lost an appetite like I have I'm afraid you don't know it's kind of hard for 'em to even git a bite to eat.'

"Grandmaw Getchell began to swell up like a toad. 'I'm sorry to be no comfort of me and my teeth,' she says, 'but I'm afraid I'll have to be excused.' she says, starts.

"Now, Cousie, I don't want to have you a-talkin' that way about Grandmother Kelly says, just as sweet as you want. 'That's entirely up to you,' says. 'Anyhow I'll be real obliged if you'll come.' 'Well, I'll be there,' says the old lady.

"Now, Cousie, I don't want to have no thing to do with the scrap between the old ones. Grandmaw Getchell she's a-settin' there, a-shakin' her head like a toad, and Grandmaw Kelly says, just as sweet as you please, 'I'm real obliged for supper, grandmaw,' she says, 'but I'm afraid I'll have to run over to eat. When a person's lost an appetite like I have I'm afraid you don't know it's kind of hard for 'em to even a bite to eat.'

FOR PEACH TREE BORERS

Howdy is it growers of peach trees—the time of year when looking what to do for the peach tree borer which is regarded as one of the worst pests of these trees. A prominent grower in Central Pennsylvania wrote to State Zoologist H. A. Surface, of Harrisburg, asking for information as to the best treatment to prevent depredations of his trees by the borer. He received a reply containing how to prepare the lime sulphur solution by boiling for one hour a pound of lime and two pounds of sulphur with each gallon of water, and apply it to a spray on the trunks and limbs of each tree. The directions were as follows:

You must apply the lime sulphur solution at least once per month during the middle of June, month of July and August and possibly oftener. Use a long spray rod and nozzle for certainly about it from personal experience.

The way to do is to make the application of lime sulphur solution among the trees in the San Jose scale, but with more sediment present putting it on as a wash. Scrape with the spray pump with the cap removed from the nozzle. Do this about the middle of April before leaving enough the earth from around the trunk of the trees with a hoe, leaving a little ditch or groove around the base of the tree. Just as soon as you have replaced the earth, mounding it up to one half foot or more. I always make the application one foot or more above the ground The next time leave the earth undisturbed and make it. But the solution will be pretty sure to penetrate the bark of the mound. Use plenty. One pint to one quart to a tree is not too much for the first time. On small trees one half pint may be enough. Also, and most one ounce of arsenic of lead for each gallon of this material, which is practically liquid; one to five gallons."

WILL RESURFACE NEW OXFORD ROAD

Work on Making Good Road of Old York Pike will Study Commence Next Week. Operations Starting at Both Ends.

Edward S. Frey, in charge of state highway work in Adams and York counties, stated this morning that work would be started in the very near future—probably next week—resurfacing the pike between Gettysburg and New Oxford. The work is to be done thoroughly and the road will conform to the concrete state highways when it is finished.

It is understood that Mr. Frey will place local men to work on the road, starting from New Oxford and the other from Gettysburg. A number of workmen will be brought here for the work while they will also be open to local men who want them.

Crushed stone will be used on the road which already has a very good foundation. The wooden bridges will be replaced by open rail. Iron rail mesh is level over these, supplanting the objectionable "humps" which proves such an annoyance in automobile tourists.

There is to be no delay in the operations and Mr. Frey desires that it be done with as much speed as possible without impairing the quality of the work.

The customary rolling will follow the placing of the stone on the road and a steam roller will go through from York to Chambersburg, with but few stretches of poor road, said to be results of the work to be taken.

The purchase of the road from Chambersburg to York is now under consideration, will mean that Gettysburg will be given a line of two highways from east to west. This has been one of State Highway Commissioner Pinchot's pet ideas and the resurfacing of the road between Gettysburg and New Oxford forms one of the most important parts of the work.

It will be recalled that a town meeting a year ago had this for its object and, though much debated, finally the present determination to give a good highway was instituted in part to the work of local parties.

WAS TRAPPED IN DANGEROUS PLACE

Harvey Hartman, Employee at Bosser-Furniture Factory, Caught in Revolving Mass of Saw Dust, Shavings and Wood.

Harvey Hartman, an employee at the factory of the Bosser Furniture Company, had a narrow escape from serious injury in a most unusual way on Thursday.

The plant is equipped with a complete blower system for removing the refuse all saw dust, shavings, small pieces of wood and other material from the factory through pipes to a dram at the roof of the central portion of the establishment. The system leads from a huge inlet to the boiler room and west as fare. The system became clogged on Thursday and a number of the employees got to work to open up the various connecting pipes.

Mr Hartman went to the roof of the boiler room and with a hook and axe down into the drum where he started to clear away the accumulation of wet dust and other stuff. Suddenly, and without any warning, the machinery was restured and he was in a moment in the midst of a swirling mass of the refuse which was being carried by the drum with terrific speed and lade fair to choke him to death. He called for assistance of mind, however, and crawled out into the open.

The employees who knew he was in the drum evidently forgot to invent-ligate before starting up the machinery and when the open again before starting up the system and Mr. Hartman was in no little danger.

"Weren't you afraid of dropping into the big fan?" he was asked by fellow workmen.

"No," he replied, "I was more afraid of being blown out through the top."

UNION SERVICES

At the June meeting of the Ministerial Association, the following arrangements for union evening church services were arranged July 7, Methodist Protestant; July 14, Lutheran; July 21, Presbyterian; July 28, Chautauqua; August 4, Christian; August 11, United Brethren; August 18, Reformed; August 25, Episcopal.

It was also decided by the association to hold the morning services in the various churches on the Sunday following Sunday. There are always some people especially at the resorts who would rather worship in the quiet of their own surroundings than to go to the road to a big tent. For the benefit of such the churches of town will be open on the following Christian morning.

The hour will be arranged so as not to conflict with the services in the churches enabling those who attend church in the town to be so out to the tent if they care to do so.

WERTZ FORTUNE IS NOT A MYTH

That Wertz family fortune of some two hundred millions discredited throughout the country by the newspapers during the past few weeks seems to have some substance after all. Local people have been taking much stock in the story and in fact the enormous because of descendants of Peter Wertz who lives in Gettysburg and nearby places.

C., that the Wertz fortune is a myth and has no foundation, and the attempted recovery of same unfounded by an unscrupulous lawyer, who is trying to swindle the descendents, is a malicious falsehood and misrepresentation of fact.

FOR THE ONION WORM

It appears that the onion plants are unusually badly attacked this year by the onion worm and that many fields, even them, and cause them suddenly to wilt and die. A correspondent writing from in the eastern part of Pennsylvania wrote to State Zoologist Surface, requesting information as to the pest, and received the following reply which will be of interest to those in all growers who have gardens:

"The onion worm attacks onions is, no doubt, the Onion Maggot or Onion Fly. It is the larva of a small two-winged insect of the house fly family. Each female lays a quart of her eggs on the stalk of the onion plant, which the onion is one inch above the ground. The eggs hatch in about a week and the young maggot bores into the onion. The onion is destroyed. The addition of a little turpentine to the kerosene emulsion increases the efficiency of the mixture. The sand can be scattered very thickly around the plants so that the young maggots or onion eats."

Genghis Khan, the Scourge of the East

A PLANT-LYTED high cheek-boned man, with lair hey-keen on the heads of the Mongolian River Tribes in 1162—formed a modest plan of conquest the world. He had a small enough start for such a venture. For his tribe was only a poor Tartar chief, ruling a mere handful of families. But the boy had boundless ambition, was a natural ruler of men, was held back by no qualms of conscience—for he seems to have been born destitute of what is called a natural cruelty of nature that overrode all obstacles from pity and the leadership of his own little tribe were his only backing to bid for his military enterprises.

The lad was known as Temudjin (Iron Man) at the time when his father died. He found himself at the head of a rebellious clan that wanted to depose him for its elder, wiser chief. Temudjin thrashed his foes, then threatened and annexed neighboring tribes and became ruler of a strong federation. A still greater number of tribes opposed him. He made friends with the Great Khan of the Keraits, Toghrul, and named Temudjin as a sort of god. The Shaman thus prophesied that Temudjin would conquer the entire world.

The Tartar chief now abandoned the early name of Temudjin and took the title "Genghis Khan" (meaning "Universal Ruler"). He made a code of wise laws for his followers and called it their new name to "Yasaq" ("Brave"). Then he set out on his career of conquest.

First annexing all Tartary, he crossed the China crossed the Chinese Wall and advanced into the heart of the empire. He captured the city of Pekin and utterly destroyed ninety-six cities. He slaughtered millions of Chinese and villages. The inhabitants were put to the sword and women alike—with unspeakable tortures.

On a second campaign in China Genghis Khan in 1215 captured Pekin and burned it to the ground after having massacred almost all its people. There he founded Persia. The city of Bokhara was known as the "the center of science." It held world-wide renown as one of the richest treasures of art and literature. Genghis Khan cared no more for such things or for the world's real progress than a mule cares for the roses he has breaks through. Bokhara, with its magnificent objects of art and learning, was destroyed. The entire country was devastated, and with the fall of its cities their priceless treasures of science and culture went up in smoke. Millions of people were slain or enslaved.

Iran, Azerbaijan and Southern Russia next fell prey to the merciless Khan. Practically all of China was subdued. So were the lands and countries northwest of India.

The Tartar hordes were out of their Asian fastnesses and closed across Europe. It was then that the Turks first settled in Eastern Europe, where they were to wreak havoc on Christian nations.)

Wider and wider spread the empire of Genghis Khan. From the centre of Herat alone he is said to have slaughtered 1,200,000 men. His martial power could check his advance. His diplomacy could not stay his victorious. The more so when he won the friendship of Mandane of Tartary by satisfying an army 30,000 strong in a fierce battle waged on the ice of a frozen lake.

Genghis Khan was now master of all the territory from the China Sea to the River Dnieper. He set forth on a fresh tour of slaughter in the summer of 1227, but messengers told him that the state at that time spelt disaster for him. So his superstitious Khan turned back in haste, to wait until the spring should make him better luck. On the way homeward he fell ill and died.

Even in death his cruelties did not cease. The grim arrest of his fierce and pressing soul showed every one whom they met alone the route in the pass of burial, and nearly a thousand beautiful girls were slain, as a sacrifice to his shade.

ROOSEVELT IS READY TO LEAD NEW PARTY

Orgs Delegates to Bolt With Him.

THEY PLEDGE SUPPORT

Colonel Will Accept Nomination as Progressive.

WILL APPEAL TO THE PEOPLE

Willing to Fight, Win or Lose, on Principle Alone.

Chicago, June 21.—Colonel Roosevelt, before his political advisers and personally elected number of delegates instructed for him, read a statement of his position in the Republican nomination fight and left them to decide what position they would take in the struggle.

Mr. Roosevelt called before him the delegates from each of the states which has supported him, and the leaders in his campaign. After outlining his position, declaring that he would continue to fight on the principles he had outlined from the beginning, the colonel left the room, and the delegates and leaders sat down to deliberate what should be done.

The Roosevelt delegates, after a two hour session and after hearing Colonel Roosevelt's statement, decided to bolt, adopted a resolution providing that they should participate in the regular convention sessions until it became apparent that they could no longer take part in the proceedings.

The friends of Roosevelt leaders also determined that between sessions a caucus should be held to determine upon the action of each session as it may after that session.

In his address to the delegates Colonel Roosevelt said:

"The time has come when I feel that I must take certain statements, not only to the honestly elected members of the Republican national convention, but to the rank and file of the Republican party and the honest people of the entire nation. I want late this fight for my principles. At the moment I can only serve them principally by continuing to have the personal responsibility which their advocacy has brought me.

"On behalf of these principles I made my appeals straight to the people themselves. I went before them, I made my statement in full, and everyone I made was in the open, without concealment of any kind. The course open to me was extraordinarily bitter, but I was opposed in the solid phalanx of the big, conscienceless political bosses with back of them practically the solid phalanx of the big, conscienceless beneficiary of these special privileges in every form, and many of the big newspapers which are controlled by or conducted in the later era of the bosses and special privileges.

"Nevertheless in the appeal to the people I won. In many of the Republican states, one of the Democratic states where there is large and real Republican opposition, three of the first kinds were held, and a substantial expression of will of the people was obtained. In these primary states a million 200,000 votes, the vast majority of the Republican party, cast their ballots. I have Mr. Taft overwhelmingly over two to one. In those states I do the same by delegates to Mr. Taft's two and nearly three-fourths of my delegates came from the primary states where the people had a chance to express themselves.

"Mr. Taft's strength, as indeed of by the two rival camps already introduced chiefly resides from his city or station delegates of the nearly solid delegations from the territories, sent from the southern states, in which there is no real Republican party—South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana, and all southern states, like New York, where the people had no chance to express themselves at primary, and where the machine were placed by the bosses.

Calls For a Bolt.

"In this convention the non-resentatives are the leaders and have already received support from the bosses of reactionism men, and they control the temporary organization of the latter class who have hitherto voted against them fear to take the open step of registering connection with the Republican convention itself.

"Such are the facts against the national convention as now constituted. I decline any longer to be bound by any action it may take. I decline to regard as binding any nomination it may make. I do not regard elected bound and deliberate political theft as constituting a title to party regularity, and claim the support of my honest men of any party.

"I hope that the honestly elected nat party will at once insist upon the immediate purging of the party of its thievery, and not piecemeal by the convention.

"If this purging is not accomplished I hope that the honestly elected delegates will decline all further connection with a convention whose work is now determined, and has hitherto been determined, in a manner which has made a majority only by the action of the fraudulent delegates whom the convention has refused to strike from the rolls.

"If the leaders of the honestly elected majority should refuse to do so it is a matter with which for my cause to decide for the moment this action, though I should certainly regret to leave the will insist upon voting on the record of these fraudulent delegates as if and not separately. We cannot afford to make a claim that we intend to be surrenders half the stolen goods.

"If the honestly elected majority of the convention chooses to proceed with nominations and to make such candidates of the real Republican party I shall accept. I shall nominate them four to take such a stand, run such candidates and conduct such a movement to nominate me for the presidency. I will accept such nomination and give platform and in such event its principles. I believe the people overwhelmingly favors my being nominated I shall accept. I do not feel that I have any appeal to every honest citizen to support me, and I shall ask for no delegates through even if I do not get a majority of the votes.

"I do not with a single man to say my part in the momentous fight for the nation nothing to offer any men: only appeal to the people to vote for me, to put any hope of gain and at the risk of defeat, and to the best service I can, if, having this in view, those favored in this great fight for the rule of the people mentioned for social and industrial justice, which has not only become a clear-cut fight, for honest; but has become a fight that I feel I can desire me to lead the fight, I will do so."

COMPROMISE URGED TO HEAL BREACH

Hadley and Hughes Mentioned as Candidates.

Chicago, June 21.—Compromise candidates as a possible means of healing the breach in the Republican party and averting a more serious rupture were discussed generally in hotel corridors and in the place where political leaders gathered.

The most frequently names mention ed were those of Herbert S. Hadley, governor of Missouri, and Charles E. Hughes, of the United States supreme court, and former governor.

The boom for Governor Hadley of Missouri, who jointly contest forty-six delegates with Roosevelt in the primary election, also were canvassed as possible compromise candidates. R. F. LaFollette, of Tennessee, a cousin of Senator LaFollette, of Wisconsin, and William Barnes, jr., chairman of the state committee, were also on the list of Taft leaders of the convention. It was said that the Taft leaders would turn from the Wisconsin leaders regardless of their personal interest and preference. Details of the conference were not given out, but it was said the conference was very harmonious.

"If the offers of a compromise candidate came, it was said, from the Roosevelt leaders, the Taft leaders declared there were serious dissentions them and that they would not follow the Roosevelt men.

The Taft leaders in charge of the national committee and the national convention will not initiate any movement to bolt the convention, it was said, but will leave the Roosevelt leaders to take such a stand, run such candidates as they may choose. The movement to nominate me for the presidency will be conducted by me and my friends, who will place platform and in such event its principles. I believe the people overwhelmingly favors my being nominated I shall accept. I do not feel that I have any appeal to every honest citizen to support me, and I shall ask for no delegates through even if I do not get a majority of the votes.

"I do not with a single man to say my part in the momentous fight for the nation nothing to offer any men: only appeal to the people to vote for me, to put any hope of gain and at the risk of defeat, and to the best service I can, if, having this in view, those favored in this great fight for the rule of the people mentioned for social and industrial justice, which has not only become a clear-cut fight, for honest; but has become a fight that I feel I can desire me to lead the fight, I will do so."

WITH T, R, TO THE LIMIT

Chicago, June 21.—"Absolutely no compromise. We stand by Colonel Roosevelt to the end. If we don't get a purged roll, we'll bolt; we will not be a party to fraud, but will not withdraw."

This was the comment on the contest between President Taft and Colonel Roosevelt, made by Guy B. Swope, vice chairman of the Pennsylvania delegation to the Republican national convention. Mr. Mayo, who is William Flinn's right hand man, declared that he spoke for sixty-three out of the seventy-six delegates from Pennsylvania, the one man who will not bolt being Boies Penrose, Philadelphia county, chairman of the Republican organization.

Despite demonstrations and declarations that the Roosevelt men will not manifest among the Pennsylvania's delegates any opposition to compromises, provided the candidate is a Republican, such as Governor Hadley, William H. Coleman, of McKeesport, Republican national committee, is of the sworn. It accounts also for a Philadelphia dispatch declaring that the ties of "Hadley or Hughes."

On the whole, however, Pennsylvania's Roosevelt contingent is determined to bolt unless the colonel no matter how hard he may ride.

RULES OUT BOLTERS

The change is said to have been a victory by the situation in which the national committee now finds itself as the result of the Taft-Roosevelt situation.

Another change provided for the re cognition of the members of the national committee as delegates. It was stated that have preferential platforms and mailing committee their delegates in the respective state delegations in the convention.

SELECT PARKER TO PRESIDE

Democrats Choose Him as Temporary Chairman.

BITTER FIGHT IS EXPECTED

Arrangement Committee Acts Despite Bryan's Opposition—Other Officials Selected.

Baltimore, Md., June 21.—Alton B. Parker, of New York, for Democratic nominee for president in 1904, was chosen for the temporary chairmanship at the Democratic national convention, which meets here next week.

The selection, made by the committee on arrangements of the Democratic national committee, at its meeting at the Belvedere hotel here, promises to make a lively fight in the convention.

The three men follows: Judge Parker, Republican; Governor Henry, of Texas, Democratic; Governor Shallenberger, of Nebraska, Democratic; Governor Ellis Jones, of Kentucky.

The committee first debated the question whether it would make the nomination. Then, tabling a ballot, Judge Parker was chosen. Selected having received the plurality vote Every delegate of Kentucky, was unanimously chosen as temporary secretary, and Joseph L. Martin, of St. Louis, Mo., temporary sergeant at arms.

James was regarded as the candidate of Bryan and the anti-Parker supporters.

The naming of Judge Parker to head the temporary organization is a open defiance of William Jennings Bryan who has declared against the nomination of Parker, and the action of arrangements committee, if sustained by the convention, itself, will probably precipitate one of the most bitter fights in the history of parties at a democratic national convention.

The action of the committee of the Democratic leaders did not hesitate to declare that they were willing to fight against Judge Parker to the national convention, if necessary, and carry the floor of the convention itself.

In naming Judge Parker the sub committee was faced with he full knowledge that the choice would unquestionably stir the delegates and his friends. Members of the national committee from every state in the union are at a fight between the latter and his opponents is imminent and that it will not come before the temporary chairman is named.

Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, opposed the choice of Parker but was forced to the floor of the convention. Mr. Murphy will probably be called to the floor of the convention at the opening session whether the selection of Parker is to be ratified. Others are to name the presidential nominee and conduct the fight for the convention.

Theodore A. Bell, of California, a friend of Colonel Bryan, was talked of for chairman, but declined to accept, as did Governor Dix of New York.

Senator Kern, leader of the Wilson forces, said that the Wilson people had not decided on a temporary chairman and would abide by the committee's recommendation. He intimated that the Clark advocates will assert in the Arlington today to determine their course.
